GOOD DEMAND FOR FOODSTUFFS, SAYS BIG PACKER

F. Edison White, of Armour
& Co., Anticipates Very Active Demand

GIVES HIS REASONS

Cotton Pickers Have Man-
Sized Job and Are Ordering Big Rations

(Following is one article by W. S. Cousins, International News Service Financial Editor on the fall business outlook. These articles are based on exclusive interviews with leaders in the financial world.)

By W. S. Cousins
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—"We have entered the fall period with good demand for all packing house lines," said F. Edison White, president of Armour & Co., when requested today by International News Service for an authoritative survey of general conditions in the important packing and foodstuffs industry. Heavy demands for the packers' lines in the southern cotton states and the great agricultural sections of the west and middle west are now being made, and the packing industry, said Mr. White, will give a good account of itself in supplying these demands efficiently and economically.

"The usual harvest business is in evidence," Mr. White declared, "cotton pickers have a man-sized job ahead of them and the southern states are ordering man-sized meat rations."

Because of its direct reflection of the buying power of all types, cases and classes of citizens, the retail mercantile business of the country is generally accepted as one of the most accurate and reliable economic weather vane. As pointed out by President Robert E. Conle, of Railway Express Agency, handling 98 per cent of the express business of the country, the current of business activity back to the jobbers, then to the wholesalers and finally to the producers and manufacturers. When the public buys, goods actually move, and not until then.

For that reason the comment of President H. T. Parson, of F. W. Woolworth Company, one of the largest distributors of low-priced goods in the world, is of unusual value in reviewing the prospect for American business in the final quarter of the year. Briefly Mr. Parson says Woolworth shows a 9 per cent increase in the first 8 months of 1929 and he has reason to look for better business in the last four months of this year than in the same period in 1928.

Reports and estimates presented to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and summarized by that institution, show wholesale trade in the New York reserve district has been running along about 7 per cent ahead of last year. Considering the normal increase in population at 3 per cent, this still leaves a 4 per cent margin of general expansion in wholesale distribution of goods, which will doubtless be reflected in retail trade channels later in the year. The Thanksgiving and Christmas shopping seasons, most important of the year, lie directly ahead.

The largest increase in the period under review was reported by the machine tools industry, up 23.6 per cent. This is extremely important, since it reflects the expansion in industries requiring the tools. Stationery and typewriters showed an increase of 20 per cent, also a favorable commentary on business activity. In the line of luxury, a 20 per cent increase in silk goods, as reported by the Silk Association of America, is evidence of the more highly cultivated personal requirements of American working men—and women, by whom silk wearing apparel is regarded as a necessity rather than a luxury. Grocery trade is up 7½ per cent, men's clothing 5½ per cent and drugs 12 per cent.

MACK LOOKS FORWARD TO WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

Happy Over Two Straight Victories of His Athletics

ARE EN ROUTE TO PHILA.

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor

EN ROUTE TO PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Dr. Osler wanted then chloroformed as an act of mercy after he passed the sixtieth milestone and just to establish a point of order, the world and its four corners would like to know what the good doctor might have wished to do with a man like Connie Mack. The sixty-seven-year-old Mr. Mack was such a gibbering doting that, as he rode home to Philadelphia today at the head of his victorious Athletics, the best he could look forward to was the championship of the world by the end of the present week.

This, the greatest honor within the gift of professional baseball, was deemed to be his, practically without further contest. His ball club had just finished the first two games of the world series with the Chicago Cubs and, judging by what happened at Wrigley Field, the only reason the Athletics hadn't won three games by today was that they don't allow double-header in this series.

Twenty-six of the official fifty-four outs furnished by the Cubs during the two days in Chicago were strike-outs, so inspired was the pitching of Ehmske, Earnshaw and Grove. So rugged was the hitting of Fox, Simmons, Cochran and others that the club had yet to trail through a single inning of two ball games that saw the Cubs defeated by 3 to 1 on Tuesday and by 3 to 3 yesterday.

The assumption, therefore, was that quite a baseball team was winning this world series and this, as a matter of fact, is one of those things that you can put on the radio with an open mind and a clear conscience. The man who is making it win, however, is Mr. Connie Mack, sixty-seven years old and a living reproof to Dr. Osler and all his work and pomps.

Mr. Mack it was who conceived the dazzling bit of strategy to bring Howard Ehmske out of the moth balls for the first game and it was Mr. Mack who had the cold gall to carry the great gamble through.

There were many times that Ehmske seemed to be tottering, in spite of his thirteen strikeouts for a world record. (Continued on Page Six)

SAYS SHEARER IS SCION OF A CROYDON FAMILY

P. E. Clark, Bridgewater, Says
Family of the Lobbyist
Operated Ferry

WELL ACQUAINTED

William Baldwin Shearer, the individual who is charged with being a lobbyist and alleged to have worked against the Geneva peace conference, and is receiving much publicity in Washington, is a descendant of two old families who years ago owned estates at Croydon, is the belief of P. E. Clark, of Bridgewater.

A few weeks ago Shearer stated that his family once owned an estate at Croydon, and many individuals in the Croydon sections when interviewed, had no knowledge of a family of that name.

Mr. Clark, who has made his home in Bridgewater practically his entire lifetime, is fond of reading, and peruses history books, especially those containing accounts of Bucks County.

In the year 1697, stated Mr. Clark, today, a ferry was started across the Neshaminy Creek at Croydon, about the distance of three blocks west of where the railroad station is located. The ferry led directly across the stream from where the sharp curve occurs in Newportville Road, on the estate owned then by John Baldwin.

It was at about the same time, according to Mr. Clark that a young man by the name of Shearer, connected with an old family living there, married a daughter of John Baldwin. Both the Shearer and Baldwin families were prominent in the section, as by means of the ferry they came in contact with practically every traveler enroute between New York and Philadelphia.

The remains of the old ferry road are now almost wiped out, says Mr. Clark, who also states that an account of this one-time well-known ferry is contained in Battle's History of Bucks County.

JOHN L. JOHNSON DIES AT PHILADELPHIA HOME

Well-Known Man Worked For
P. R. R. for Years,
Since 1881

RETIRED IN 1922

John L. Johnson, a well known former resident of Bristol, died at his home in Philadelphia this morning at two o'clock. The deceased had been ill for quite sometime and his death had been expected.

John L. Johnson was the son of the late Samuel and Margaret (L.) Johnson. He was well known in Bristol and was for many years associated with his brother, the late Benjamin Johnson in the clothing business at Mill and Wood streets. He had a large acquaintance among railroad men.

John L. Johnson started to work for the P. R. R. Company, December 4, 1881, as an usher at Broad Street Station. He continued with the Company for a period of 40 years and six months and in June, 1922, was retired from active service and his name was placed on the Company's "roll of honor." During the entire time that he was employed by the P. R. R. he was located at Broad Street Station.

Mr. Johnson was advanced to train starter on March 1, 1883, then to ticket examiner on May 1, 1884. He served in this last position for a period of 13 years, during which time on two occasions, in the summer of 1893, and the summer of 1894, he was assigned to duty as an extra assistant station master at Broad Street Station. He was promoted to assistant station master on October 1, 1897.

Continuing his employment with the P. R. R., Mr. Johnson was advanced to baggage agent August 1, 1906, and then to station master, April 1, 1913. This position he occupied until January 16, 1922, when he was promoted to acting assistant passenger train master, with headquarters at Broad street station. When Mr. Johnson started to work for the Pennsylvania Railroad Broad street station was the terminus of the Philadelphia division.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Irwin, of Philadelphia, and two sisters, Miss Annie and Miss Alice Johnson, who reside in Bristol.

The funeral arrangements have not as yet been completed.

ADDITION BEING PLACED AT CORNWELLS BANK

Cost of the New Section Will Be Approximately
$10,000

TO BENEFIT PATRONS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 10.—Work is progressing in splendid manner upon the brick addition to the Cornwells State Bank, here.

The additional space will measure about 20 by 30 feet, being about one-third the size of the original building. The new portion will comprise a meeting room for the board of directors, bookkeepers' room, and a new vault. The addition is being constructed at the rear of the main building.

With the completion of the rooms the Cornwells Bank will have two vaults, both modern in every detail. The added space, with other changes that will be made in the older section of the structure will be of great benefit to the patrons.

It is planned to rearrange the forepart of the bank building, and an entire new lighting system is to be installed. The interior walls and ceiling of the new portion will be of tinted plaster.

The board of directors and workers at the institution have long felt the need of additional space, being greatly cramped for room.

The addition is being erected at an approximate cost of $10,000. The contract for the work has been given to Howard I. Leister, of Croydon.

Equipment at the bank is of the most up-to-date type, and no additional purchases in this line will be required.

McSPARRON WILL SPEAK HERE SUNDAY IN M. E. CHURCH

Well-Known Orator of Lancaster County Here Sunday Morning

MEMBERSHIP ROLL-CALL

Phila. Orchestra Harpist Will Play at the Evening Service

Sunday is to be a red letter day in the annals of the Bristol Methodist Church according to a program which is now in the course of preparation.

The activities will begin with the morning service at 10.45 when the Sunday School scholars, officers and teachers will assemble in the Sunday School room at 10.15 and at 10.30 adjourn to the church auditorium for Sunday School-Church Rally Day services.

A well known orator of ability and distinction in the person of the Honorable John A. McSparron, of Lancaster County, has been procured as the speaker for this service. Mr. McSparron is a man whose services are continually in demand and whom the Bristol Methodists are exceedingly fortunate in obtaining as the speaker. A few years ago he was a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania on the Democratic ticket. He has spoken throughout the state of Pennsylvania in Sunday School and churches and upon numerous other occasions and wherever he appears there is always a capacity audience. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

Following the address of the Honorable McSparron, there will be a church membership roll call at which time the names of those who are on the roster of the church will be called and an effort is being made to have the largest percentage of attendance as possible.

In the evening at 6.45, the Epworth League will conduct a rally at its regular Sunday evening service.

A rare musical treat is in store for the evening service at 7.45 when Mr. Frank A. Nicoletta, harpist of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will be present and render selections. Mr. Nicoletta is a musician of note and needs no introduction to lovers of music and especially those who are particularly fond of the harp. The evening service has been designated as "Harvest Home" service. This is to be a service of thanksgiving and the membership of the church will make contributions of fruits, vegetables and flowers, which will be used as decorations for the altar. These are to be sent to the church on Saturday morning and on Monday they will be sent to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Philadelphia.

HUBBY SCORES ONE

By "The Stroller"

A member of the Mothers' Association planned attending the masquerade party given by that organization Wednesday night. She borrowed a costume from a well-known professional man of Bristol and planned to call for it early that evening.

Her husband told her, earlier during the week, not to go and make herself foolish. But she insisted that she was going and have a good time.

The evening for the party came and the woman in question had been in Philadelphia all day. She had forgotten the party but kept saying to her husband: "It seems I had some place to go tonight." He did not say a word.

When it was too late to attend the masquerade, Mrs. — says to her husband: "Oh! I know where I was going tonight. It is the night for the Mothers' Association masquerade party." "Sure," her husband replied, "I knew that all the time." "Then he laughed," says the wife.

AN EFFECTIVE WEAPON

In Hawaii housewives drove the billboards from the landscape by the simple method of convincing their merchants that they would not buy products advertised on boards that marred the scenery. Can it be that Hawaii is more awake to the value of its scenic beauty than are our own states?

If the pledge which the Garden Club of America has endorsed is widely accepted by the women of the United States, it may not be long before billboards cease to be obnoxious to the lovers of nature. The pledge reads: "As a practical protest against the desecration of our countryside, I shall favor those products not advertised on the landscape."

Boycotting is drastic. Often the weapon has been used unjustly. But there are times when harsh treatment is necessary, and the ladies have long found misplaced billboards revolting to their sense of the beautiful and the appropriate.

If only outdoor advertisers, big and little, would pause to realize the significance of this pledge and the threat it embodies, they would find that some of their costly advertising is a ruinous boomerang. There is room in this broad land for both billboards and natural beauty undefiled.

AVIATION NEEDS HIM

Aviation reluctantly releases William P. MacCracken from the post of assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aeronautics. He has been a resourceful and eager friend of aviation and his administration was coincident with the period of aviation's most rapid development in the United States.

With the aid of MacCracken's organizing genius and knowledge of air transportation aviation has made great strides since 1926, the year preceding his appointment. Twelve million miles a year are now being flown compared with only 4,000,000 three years ago. Established air lanes have been increased from 8,401 to 35,200 miles and 9,000 additional miles of light airways have been provided. Ten times the number of passengers are being carried and the annual volume of air mail jumped from $10,000 to 5,500,000 pounds.

While Assistant Secretary MacCracken was its head the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce was organized for the regulation of interstate flying, advising of the air industry and promotion of aeronautical research. That chaos did not result from the phenomenal development of air navigation was largely due to MacCracken's organization.

Although MacCracken's retirement is a real loss there is satisfaction and comfort in the knowledge that his successor, Clarence M. Young, was trained under him.

SYNOPSIS
Jerry, a chorus girl, concocts a plan to help her friend, Violet, a member of the same show, out of a difficulty. She is in love with Wally, but if they marry without his Uncle Steve's consent, he loses a fortune of four or five million. Jerry asks Wally to have his uncle call on her so that she may see him alone to arrange matters for them. Uncle Steve immediately mistakes her for Violet, and tells her he is going to get his lawyer to help him handle the matter. Jerry decides to pretend she is a scheming gold-digger, so that Uncle Steve will be happy to have some one else marry Wally. That some one else is to be Violet, of course.

CHAPTER III
Now, prepared for the worst, Stephen determined to speed matters up a bit. If he was to suffer, it was best to have it over with. There was no pleasure for him in prolonging the agony. Moreover, if they remained in that room much longer, there was no predicting what Jerry might take it into her head to want. She had not asked for an automobile yet, or a fur coat. Perhaps he ought to consider himself fortunate. He helped her on with the coat she had picked up from the chair, making a quick mental valuation of it. He knew enough about clothes to understand the value of her gown, and, well, as for her hats, he was soon to find out. He had also not failed to notice the array of bracelets she wore and the diamond necklace which had certainly cost some man a pretty fortune. If Wally was going to marry her, he would need a mint to support her.

Lee produced his roll of bills, and Jerry took two twenties

As they were about to leave, Jerry suddenly remembered that Wally was there. Should he come along too? Blake insisted that it was best for them to go out alone, since this was their first meeting, and it would be easier to get acquainted. Stephen felt like saying that they were well enough acquainted already, but he realized he must be discreet. It would work out for Wally's advantage later on, he was sure. Jerry called Wally, who came in rather sheepishly with Violet at his side.

"Wally, darling," Jerry cooed, "you don't mind if I leave you alone for a little while. Of course, you don't. Violet, this is Mr. Lee and Mr. Blake."

Violet curtsied modestly. "Listen, sweetness," Jerry said to Violet, "I'm having lunch with Mr. Lee. Would you like to go with Wally?"

Violet, remembering that she must act the part of a drooping flower, took Jerry's arm affectionately.

"If Mr. Saunders would like me to."

"I'd consider it an honor, Miss Dayne," Wally assured her. "Then run along, and we'll see you afterwards."

"Isn't she a modest little violet?" Jerry turned to Lee after they had gone.

"Yes," he assented, "she seems like a nice child."

Jerry wrapped her coat about her, and picked up her bag, and she was about to take Lee's arm, when the bedroom door opened, revealing an overdressed Mabel who had decided not to be left behind. "Do I intrude?" she asked coyly, making a graceless entrance.

Jerry, assuring her she was welcome, introduced her to the gentlemen.

The expression on Blake's face was pitiful to see. He looked from her to Lee, silently pleading to be rescued from this terrible woman. Lee, for his part, was happy that he was not the only one to suffer. He had wanted Blake to come along in the first place, and it was right and proper that Blake, as well as he, should be tied down to an impossible creature. The complaint look on Blake's face had disappeared with Mabel's entrance, and in its place was one of consternation, fear, discomfort, and perhaps many others more difficult to describe.

"Where'll we feed the animals?" Jerry asked Mabel.

"Let's drive out to some nice roadhouse. I feel just like a big dish of frogs' legs."

She turned to Blake apologetically.

"Of course, I'm not terribly dressed up, but we'll stop at a florist's and you can cover me up with orchids."

Lee smiled and exchanged a look with the disconsolate Blake, who already had visions of an empty bank account. He had always lived well, but he never felt just right about wasting his money. His intuition told him that he was in for a regular orgy of spending, and he was to find out soon enough that his intuition was right. It was just as if he could see behind his back, for at the precise moment when he had looked at Lee, Jerry was winking to Mabel and pointing to the soap that literally covered one of the chairs. That aggressive young woman needed only a hint to make her understand.

"Wait a minute," she said to Blake, just as the men were beginning to think that they could get the luncheon engagement over at last, "don't you want some soap?" She held up one of the cakes for Blake to see.

"What for?" Blake asked. "The usual purposes. It's for a girl that's hard up. I'll put you down for three dozen."

"Don't be stingy," Jerry interposed. "Let Mr. Blake have six dozen. Or if he insists, make it nine."

Stupefied, the two men listened to them. When they used their money for flowers, well, that was perhaps comprehensible. But this was unheard of.

"Why not let him have a gross?" they heard Mabel suggest.

At least Blake got back enough of his presence of mind to talk. "A gross—why that's twelve dozen—a hundred and forty-four bars."

"But it's only thirty cents a cake," Mabel assured him, "and you save six dollars that way."

Lee began to think himself very fortunate in having escaped buying soap. Now it was his turn to be lunch at Blake's, and this time he made no effort to suppress it. His laugh, however, was short lived.

"Don't be jealous," said Jerry. "You can have a gross too."

"Now you've both made six dollars! Isn't that grand?" Mabel exclaimed.

"No, sir, Mr. Blake shan't make as much as Uncle Steve," Jerry decided. "I'm going to let him have half a gross more."

At that Mabel decided that Mr. Blake could have two gross, and Jerry, not to be outdone, would have it that Uncle Steve should buy three gross. Mabel raised it to four, and at this point Blake and Lee stopped in to put a stop to the haggling. They agreed on four each, and began making mental calculations as to how many years they would have to use the same brand of soap if they did not care to call it a waste of money.

As soon as the soap deal was closed, Sadie came in with several hat boxes, announcing that the millinery shop had just sent them for Jerry to make a choice. Jerry brought them into the bedroom and came out with her selection.

"Oh, dear," she sighed, "I haven't any small change! Have you got thirty-nine dollars? The boy is waiting for his money."

Lee produced his roll of bills, and Jerry took two twenties. "Thank! Here you are, Sadie—here's the fifty. The boy can keep the extra dollar. I believe in tipping, don't you, Uncle Steve?"

"I see you do!" he replied crisply. "But I don't throw my money away," from Jerry.

"No—not yours!"

Jerry examined her hat once more in the mirror, and announced that now they were ready to lunch. But she still must decide on one thing—what would they do after luncheon? Oh, yes, they would go to the ball game.

"And we can bet," Jerry decided. "I simply dote on betting. Have you got a hundred dollars?"

Lee shook his head. He would have to make an end of this some how, and he might just as well start here. But Jerry looked at him doubtfully.

LIVE
where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

COMPLICATION IS QUICKLY ENDED BY NEW KONJOLA

"This Was the Medicine I Should Have Had Long Ago," Says Lady Now Well and Happy

MRS. EMMA PETERSON

"I was just about a wreck from constipation, stomach, liver and kidney troubles and nervousness," said Mrs. Emma Peterson, R. F. D. No. 1, Henderson avenue, Kertown, Penna. "I was run-down and weak. Food did me little good, for it fermented in my stomach, causing gas and pains. I had to get up time and time again every night, and constipation was only temporarily relieved by the most powerful laxatives."

"Three bottles of Konjola did more for me than all the medicines and treatments I ever took combined did over a period of years. I am going right ahead with this wonderful treatment, though I am eating, sleeping and feeling fine. I wish I had known of this remarkable remedy long ago, it is the medicine I should have had in the first place."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

"THIS oil heat DOES NOT COST MORE THAN COAL"

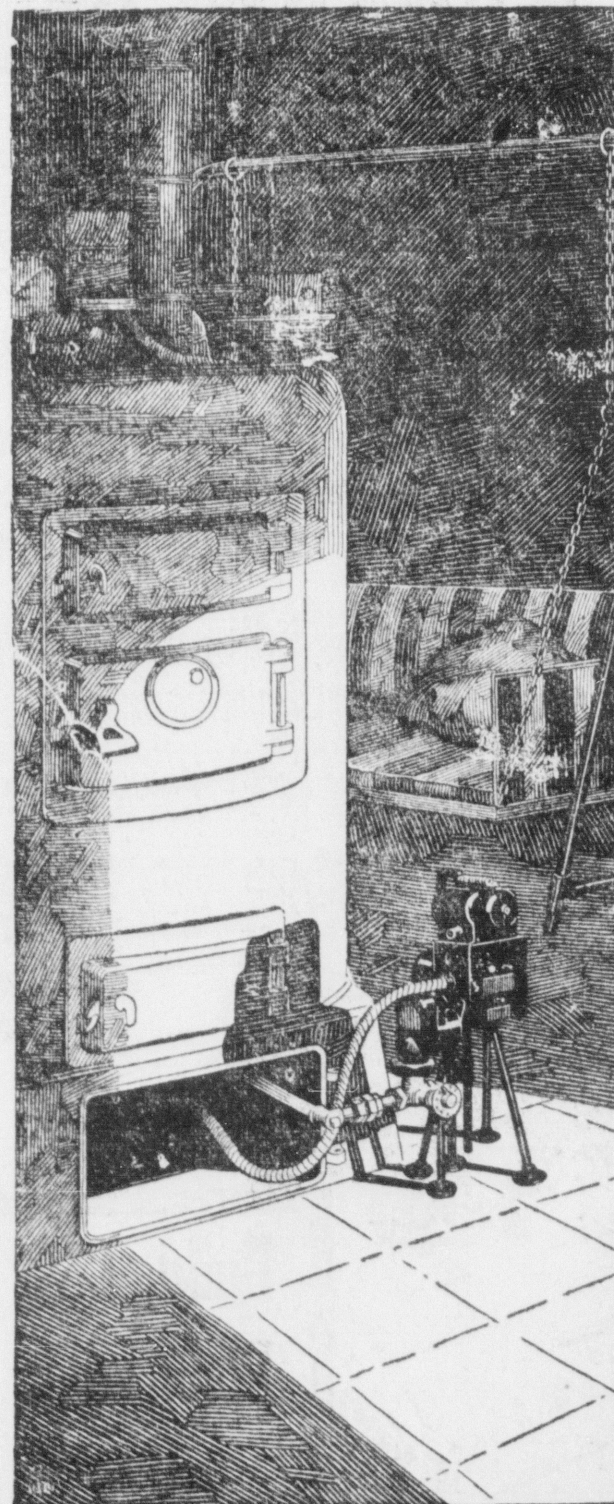

Let's get this straight. The care-free convenience of Silent Automatic Oil Heat is NOT a luxury. You do NOT pay a high premium in fuel costs. It is NOT a costly modern improvement for big homes only... it is just as adaptable to the modest cottage.

More than that, you do NOT have to pay a tremendous price for the original equipment. The Silent Automatic... one of the most moderately priced Oil Burners on the market... is now generally recognized as the overwhelming favorite in metropolitan centers. An amazing record of OWNER SATISFACTION has caused Silent Automatic sales to double each year, and has elevated the "Silent" to its position of clean-cut leadership wherever it is sold.

In Detroit its economy and utter dependability are so widely known that it outsells all other oil burners combined. In Boston it is almost equally outstanding. New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and other great centers have conferred degrees of favoritism that stand alone in the industry.

To those who are hesitating about installing oil heat we give the above assurance and refer you to neighborhood users. With it we want to give a warning... to PLACE ORDERS NOW. The annual fall rush is starting. You will need your "Silent" with the first cool days. Place your order NOW to avoid disappointment and inconvenience. Liberal terms of payment can be arranged.

THE PRICE of Silent Automatic is $395 complete with automatic safety and operating controls. Nominal installation charges depend on basement conditions, oil storage capacity and local requirements.

PROOF!

"I have had one full season operation of the Silent Automatic Oil Burner and it has given me entire satisfaction. My building has been heated comfortably and at some saving over coal cost, which I consider is very good with labor, dust, dirt and ashes eliminated.

Very truly,
HARRY H. HEADLEY,
Wood and Washington Sts.,
Bristol, Pa.

"I have used the Silent Automatic Oil Burner in my furnace during the past season—Have found it very satisfactory—a great labor saver and less expense for fuel."

MARTHA C. HUGHES,
601 Radcliffe St.,
Bristol, Pa.

"When we were heating the house with coal, the average for over four years was about $425.00 per year. My oil cost using Silent Automatic for 1928-29 was $315.00, so without giving credit for saving of Janitor's salary of $15.00 per month, you can see I am ahead of the game financially, and on top of that we are more than ahead of the game when it comes to real heating comfort."

"From September 1927 until April 1928 I spent $166.28 for coal at my residence. My total oil bill from September first, last, to the present day (August 10th) has amounted to $154.56. In April of 1928 I had a Silent Automatic installed, and starting with the first of September of that year I had an excellent opportunity of making a study of the comparative costs between coal and oil heat."

"I have a ten room house. My coal bills for seven years previous to the installation of the oil burner averaged $215.30 per year. For the two years since using oil I average $226.55 without any added cost for services which are incidental to coal firing such as for instance removal of ashes, etc., which averages approximately $5.00 per month for eight months."

"Winter 1926-27 using coal, $252.75
" 1927-28 using oil, 190.28
" 1928-29 using oil, 200.28"

BRISTOL HIGH TO PLAY AT LANGHORNE FRIDAY

By T. M. Jané
Langhorne High School grounds will be the scene of the combat between the above named school and Bristol High tomorrow.

Last season the Cardinal and Gray defeated the visitors in a very close battle but not until Coach Townsend rushed some of his first string regulars into the game.

This year Langhorne is out to even the matters. Having the home field advantage the Bristol opponents intend to run entirely over the Bristolians.

Coach Townsend has drilled the players on several new plays and hopes to walk away with a victory. He states that several changes will be made in his line-up.

To date Bristol has tied one game and lost two and has not scored any points.

Mack Looks Forward To World Championship

But Connie sat tight behind what he knew to be a full hand and they had to pay him off accordingly.

Yesterday, he displayed his acumen in a different light but only to prove himself what he had been on Tuesday—a good gambler. The good gambler, they say, always knows when he is liked and so, when Earnshaw, having become chilled while sitting through the lengthy third and fourth innings, showed signs of being through for the day, Connie didn't hesitate to declare him through.

State News

HARRISBURG, Oct. 10.—(INS)—Harrisburg baseball fans are eagerly awaiting the outcome of negotiations understood to be under way whereby the local franchise would be sold to the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League.

The Cardinals, it is said, would use its Harrisburg team to season and smooth off the rough playing edges of the younger players. Harrisburg thus would rank with the "baseball farms" maintained at Martinsburg by the champion Athletics and the Yankees' seasoning camp at Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge League.

In order to place a team here, St. Louis would have to purchase the local franchise. The price offered, it is understood, is satisfactory and, it accepted, would enable the Harrisburg Athletic Club to close out the 1928 season with the figures on the right side of the ledger.

GREENVILLE, Oct. 10.—(INS)—Prof. Ernest Howard has resigned his position at Thiel College to become head of the foreign language department at St. Theresa College, Winona, Minn.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 10.—(INS)—A sign of revival of prosperity in the coal fields and a growing interest in increased mining efficiency, is apparent in the announcement made here today that four Pennsylvania coal companies are about to join a three-year employee training program.

Four night schools will be set up this week in as many cities of the state for the purpose of offering practical instruction to mine employees. They will be conducted by the school of mines and metallurgy of the Pennsylvania State College through the college Department of Engineering Extension. Each company will encourage the participation of its employees and furnish lecturers to cooperate with the staff of 14 men from the college.

Cities in which classes are to be located are Pottsville, Tower City, Shenandoah and Mount Carmel. The participating coal companies are the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, Madera, Hill and Co., Susquehanna Coaleries Co., and the Lehigh Valley Coal Co.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 10.—Hunting will be good in Venango County, Forest County, Clarion and other adjacent districts, in the opinion of Game Warden Herbert Beatty who has just completed a first-hand survey of conditions.

"The drought has been pronounced in all this territory, but there is enough food for game until fall comes, and then we will resort to feeding the birds and small game that survive," Warden Beatty said. Hunting licenses are being issued at the rate of 29 to 25 daily.

ANDALUSIA

Mrs. Ernest Wichterman, Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Forrest Jackson, Mrs. Norman Fries, Mrs. Emma Fries and Miss Virginia Leveridge attended a card party at the home of Mrs. Edward Thomas, Cornwells Heights. A wonderful time was had by all. A number of Cornwells and Edgely folk were present and enjoyed a good game of "Old Maids." Mrs. Vansant and Mrs. Thomas won prizes for "Old Maids." Mrs. Richard Fechtenburg won the prize for having the highest score in pinochle.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Staub and family spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Correll.

Little "Billy" Jackson had the misfortune of having his little pet puppy run over by a machine and killed on Tuesday morning.

Folk are glad to see Harry Oliver around again after suffering with neuralgia for two weeks.

NEWPORTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. William Clifton entertained the following guests on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. George Rodgers and children, Mr. and Mrs. William Beck, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Silberger, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Martin Cassidy entertained last week, Miss Madeline Gruber, of Willow Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Everitt and family spent Saturday evening with Mrs. Harry Rhodes and daughter, Dorothy, of Allentown, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bilger, and family.

Harry Snyder, of Frankford, was a week-end guest at his parents' home, Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder.

The ladies of Fergusonville plot are planning a sour kroust supper which they will hold October 19th.
